WE PART.
We part! No more for us the gentle star
That softly shines upon a blended way,
But such must from the other wander far,
And separate bear the burden of our day.
We part! Yet still to me this youthful dream
Has been of life the very latest spring;
A joyous dream that in the vision came,
And even now my heart will to it cling!
We part, and I go forth alone, all alone—
A weary wanderer on life's dreary waste;
The bloom and freshness of my heart are gone,
And pleasure's sweetest leave but a March trace.
Yet still for another be thy young heart's fate,
A soldier one day home at thy side;
But may it then be, as it shall be, too late,
To know devotion, and to make it thine.
Then farewell, 'til all my heart can say,
No harsh reproach my lips will ever give;
Bright, cloudless, peaceful be your onward way—
Serving-love, and affection may you ever live.

Mohammed.
This man has exercised more power and greater influence upon the races and opinions of mankind perhaps than any other individual. He belonged to the noble line and kindred of Hashem, the only son of Adallah, one of the descendants of Ishmael the progenitor of the Arabian people. From his childhood he was remarkable for mental endowments. In a conversation with a Nestorian monk he showed such knowledge and talent, the monk remarked that great things might be expected from him.

His first great religious purpose was to crush out idolatry, and make the worship of the true God constitute the basis of his future operation. How far he was sincere or an impostor we cannot at this distant day affirm. Doubtless he was an enthusiast, guided by craft and fanaticism to a very great extent.

His religion prohibited gambling, usury, wine or strong drink, and the use of swine meat. It taught his followers the number of prophets who have been from time to time sent by God into the world amounts to no less than two hundred and twenty-four thousand, and that Moses, Christ and himself were the most prominent. Practical duties of his religion was to pray five times a day, with the face directed to the temple of Mecca, pilgrimage to Mecca, religious abstinence, alms legal and voluntary. It also allows a Musselman four wives, though Mohammed had seventeen, and strange to add all of them were widows save one.

One of his books gives an account of the translation of the prophet by night to the third heaven upon a winged animal named Alborak, where he saw unutterable things. The success of his cause was chiefly on the account of the rewards and sensuality of the Prophet's paradise, which is located above the seven heavens and next to the throne of God. The righteous Mohammedan is taught to believe that he will be re-freeshed as he enters paradise by drinking at the great pond of the Prophet, which, according to his description, is an exact square, of a month's journey. Its water is whiter than milk or silver, and more delicious and odoriferous than musk, with more golden cups set around it than there are stars in the heavens, and whosoever drinks here will thirst no more forever.

The tree of happiness, called Yuba, which stands in the centre of Paradise, with a branch to reach every true believer's house, laden with grapes, dates, pomegranates, and with other fruits unknown to mortal taste. The boughs of this tree will spontaneously bend down to the hand of the person who would gather of its fruits. The Koran speaks of the four grand rivers of Paradise as its principal ornament. These rivers flow with water, milk, honey and wine, all taking their origin from the roots of the tree of happiness, which is a grand luxury for its population.

But the highest delight of the Moslem, which is held out to him in Paradise, are the stately pavilions and hollow pearls. Some of them are said to be sixty miles long and as many broad; and these glorious mansions are eclipsed by the resplendent beautiful black-eyed girls, the enjoyment of whose company will be the principal felicity of the faithful.

These creatures are not made of clay as mortal women are, but of the richest musk, and therefore free from all natural defects, and that the poorest man in paradise shall not have less than seventy-two thousand in his brilliant domicile, where sweet-toned music shall flow out forever in lovely strains.

BOLIVAR, April 9, 1897.

THE ANTIQUARY.—A Southern contemporary calls attention to the fact that the 26th of April, the day chosen by the ladies of the South for decorating the graves of our loved and lost, in the late terrible but unsuccessful struggle for independence, will soon be at hand. On that day let all work be laid aside by fair and lovely "woman," that she may wend her way to the last resting place of our hero dead, and enshroud their low and earthly moulds with wreaths of evergreen and beautiful spring flowers, and drop one silent tear upon the spot which enshrines the manly forms of those who yielded up their lives for us, so cheerfully.

The stock of cotton in this country on the 1st of September last was 344,322 bales; receipts since, 1,411,464; exports, 783,242; present stock, 560,220 bales, besides 78,107 at interior points—making the total receipts of last year's crop about 1,500,000 bales. The receipts between this and next September will probably swell the crop to 1,750,000 bales.

Hon. Robert Toombs, who is now quietly remaining at his home at Washington, Wilkes county, Georgia, in a private letter to a friend, says he prefers to live there, with all the political disadvantages, to living anywhere else in the world.

The convention at Charleston has agreed to allow negroes to run one of their own color on the white man's ticket to the convention and state legislature. Wade Hampton holds this to be wise and just.

There is to be a grand Masonic festival held at Paris during the Exposition

Not to be Read by the Ladies.

If your wife loves you, you need read no farther, for these directions are not intended for you. You need no directions. You can get drunk as often as you please, be guilty of robbery, assassination, battle, murder, sudden death and privy conspiracy, and make your wife believe, by means of a single kiss, that you are one of the saints of the earth. For those husbands who only apparently, not really, have the hearts of their wives, we lay down the following directions:

If on your wedding night you fail to get drunk and break all your mother-in-law's crockery, do something equally outrageous as soon as possible. You will then always be able to scare your wife into submission, by reminding her of what you have done, and what you may be provoked to do again.

If she is fond of entertainment, and you are not, wait till her fashionable friends are assembled at the house, and then walk into the parlor with nothing on but your shirt and stockings. It will doubtless have the effect of making the "company fly the room."

If you are fond of smoking the pipe and your wife complains of your breath on account of it, eat onions; it will make her forget the pipe.

If you have a baby, groan as if your last hour had come, whenever it begins squealing at night. You will not then be called upon to walk it.

As sick rooms are not pleasant, always have business that will keep you down town the whole day and half the night, when your wife is sick.

When you get home at four o'clock in the morning, after having lost a month's earnings "fighting the tiger," or playing a "game of draw" with your friends, tell your wife your business is getting so large that the labor of carrying it on is breaking down your constitution and you must take a partner; but when she mentions a new dress, shake your head and talk about economy and hard times.

There are certain little things that must be done daily by one or the other of every married couple. Impress upon your wife that the performance of these is very distasteful to you, and force her to attend to them herself. Among them is the kindling of the fire in the morning. If you have no servant, lie in bed and let your wife do it. Also wait for her to pour out the water for you to wash, brush your clothes, and place your slippers by a chair before the fire. When all is prepared get out of bed and dress yourself; take care not to show, by word or look, that you appreciate the little attentions that have been shown you. But if you find that any of them have been overlooked, be very cross and fretful during the rest of the morning.

When you are asked to go out and make an evening call, complain of a bad headache. Make it a point never to praise any dish on the table, especially the one to which you know your wife has given her personal attention. Such a course will suppress any lurking vanity there may be in her nature.

When you are in a room together, always occupy the most comfortable seat, after having offered it to her in such a way that she can't with any propriety accept it.

Keep her in perfect ignorance as to the condition of your business, although she is as deeply interested in it as you are, and no injury can result to it by your telling her all about it. By keeping it to yourself you have the satisfaction of feeling that you are superior to her because you know what she does not.

If from any cause you are detained at home, and find the time heavy on your hands, it may be that your wife is interested in a novel that she is about half through with. Take it from her as if you merely wished to glance at it; sit down and read it by the hour. She, in the meantime, may amuse herself with sewing.

If you do not keep a carriage, and your wife tells you that she and the children need an airing, tell her to wait for the death of one of her friends when she may ride to the funeral free of cost.

If any of your wife's relatives come to stay at the house, let the high price of provisions be the sole topic of conversation in their hearing; but borrow all the money you can from your father-in-law, and if he keeps a carriage never dream of getting one yourself.

When you wish to make your wife a present, buy something that is not necessary about the house, and never let slip an opportunity of making her thank you for it.

Whenever you are sick enough to lay up at home, exaggerate your symptoms, and make your wife think you are going to die. If she has any heart, at all, she will nurse you better for it.

When a man is in a bad humor, it is a great relief to him to find some object on which to vent his wrath without running any personal risk. A married man will always find such an object in his wife's hair. Whenever you feel worried about anything, abuse your wife; it will be a great relief to you. And when she appears before company with eyes red from weeping, assume the most affectionate manner and chide her for going out shopping on such a raw, windy day.

Finally give your wife a "manicure man's look" every time she does not exactly please you—and if she is not completely spiritless and subdued by the end of the first year—get a divorce and marry a minister's daughter.
